"The World's Best Table Water"

TIN ORE FOUND IN NEVADA MINE

Tin ore has recently been found in the extreme northern part of Lander county, Nevada, in an unnamed short range of hills 20 miles north of Battle Mountain, a town on the Southern Pacific system. It was discovered by chance by an employee of the Russell cattle ranch, in which the range is situated, who had picked up from the alluvial wash at the base of the range a piece of curious looking "rock." What the substance was, however, remained unknown until a mining engineer who had been in Mexico chanced to see it at Battle Mountain and recognized it as "wood tin," a name given to this form of the natural oxide of tin that is characterized by a concentric banding resembling the annual growth rings of wood. Search was immediately made for the bedrock source of the ore, which has already been found at several places in a belt two miles long. At the request of Senator Pittman these occurrences were recently examined by Adolph Knopf, a geologist of the U. S. geological survey, department of the interior.

The ore occurs in narrow veins in rhyolite lavas, which were erupted in middle Tertiary time. In places the veins are sufficiently numerous to form low-grade lodes, but because of the small development work so far done not much is known as to the size, extent, and richness of these lodes. The indications of the stronger lodes, taken in connection with their geology are, in the opinion of government geologists, such as to warrant further exploration.

The deposits resemble closely those of the Mexican states of Durango, Zacatecas, and Guanajuato, but are wholly unlike all other tin deposits, most of which are associated with intrusive granites. Not only has the tin ore been found in place at a number of localities over a considerable area, but placer tin ore has been found in all the gulches heading in this area, and also in some of those at the north end of the Shoshone mesa, the prominent basalt-capped table-land north of Battle Mountain. The known tin-bearing belt is a small fraction of a great area—1,500 square miles or more—in this part of Nevada that is underlain by rhyolites similar to those associated with the tin ore in northern Lander county. This rhyolite area extends at least as far north as the Nevada-Idaho state line. Clearly this area merits further attention from the prospector, especially such parts of it as have been but superficially examined because they are barren of deposits of precious metals.

HELPING OUT THE FAMILY. "I hope, Nora," said the mistress, "that you are truthful above all things."

"Yes, mum," replied Nora. "O! am on my own account. O! only tells lies 't' the callers fer the family, mum."

REMARKABLE SERIES OF ACCIDENTS IN LEHI.

Pleasant Grove, Sept. 1.—The past week has been replete with accidents in Pleasant Grove. Yesterday on the state road south of town a little boy and girl, aged 14 and 11, children of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith, were driving along in a buggy when a seven-passenger auto ran into them, completely demolishing the buggy and badly bruising the children.

The day before Charles Tolle was riding horseback on the state road north of town. An auto gave the signal and Tolle turned to one side, but the car struck the horse, throwing both it and the rider completely over the machine. Tolle was badly bruised and had all his teeth loosened. The horse was badly cut.

Early in the week Glen Matthews came home from Midvale with both his upper and lower jaws broken and his skull fractured. A doctor fixed him up with bandages, but Matthews will have to take his food in liquid form through a straw for some time. An irate smelterman and a pick handle caused the trouble, the wielder of which will have to answer in court soon as Matthews is in condition to attend.

Wednesday Leslie Freeman got his hand in a circular saw at the beet slicing station below town and lost two of his fingers. His thumb was split in two, but will be saved.

Early in the week Lloyd Olson got his index finger in the buzz saw at his father's planing mill and the end was cut off.

Fetters, an electrical lineman, filed a similar application, listing his liabilities at $131.31, assets $20, the latter being placed in the exemption class.

Permission was granted Henry Carl Weiss of Tremonton to amend his petition in bankruptcy, previously filed, by including another debt of $350.
